

December, 2011 Homeschool.com Picks The Reading Game as a Top Educational Gift Pick of 2011, and awards it the 2012 Homeschool.com Seal of Approval.

The Reading Game is excellent for the homeschooler learning who is struggling to read. "The Reading Game has proved effective in helping to boost confidence and literacy skills in children who have had a difficult time learning to read." This game makes reading fun - and gives your child the tools to read with confidence!

The Reading Game is not just one game--but six card games and six illustrated storybooks. The game is a fast action memory card game. Each card game hard-wires 30 vocabulary words into the child's memory after a few short games. Once the card game is played a few times, the child can easily read the accompanying book from start to finish. By the time the sixth card game/book set is completed, the child will have 180 words hard-wired into their memory, almost half of which are among the 100 most commonly used English words.

Author Kenneth Hodkinson of the best selling vocabulary series, "Wordly Wise", developed the Reading Game. It is suitable for use with pre-school thru first grade children and for children of any age who are having difficulty learning to read.

There are many great things to be said about The Reading Game, one of which was stated during a field study in a learning environment, "I found the game to be a phenomenal tool for memory and reading. There is nothing I would change about the game."

The Reading Game makes learning to read entertaining and exciting. What kid wouldn't want to play games and read all at the same time? What fun!
